Chapter 427: The Eternal Battlefields Realm

A God’s Restlessness

As eons passed within the Godverse, Sung Jin-Woo began to feel the weight of his omnipotence. There were no challenges left in existence. All threats from the outer multiverse had been eliminated, leaving nothing to test his infinite power or his creations' might. This sense of stagnation gnawed at him, for even a god craved excitement in his eternal reign.

To quell his boredom, Sung Jin-Woo devised a new purpose for his creations—a realm of endless combat, where angels and dark angels would clash in titanic battles to prove their strength and resolve.

The Eternal Battlefields Realm

1. A Realm of War:

Sung Jin-Woo created the Eternal Battlefields Realm, a vast, desolate realm spanning countless dimensions. Its skies burned crimson, its ground shimmered with black obsidian, and the very air was thick with the essence of battle. This realm was designed for one purpose: eternal war.

The Eternal Battlefields Realm was enchanted with divine laws that allowed the resurrection of the fallen. No soldier, angel, or dark angel would be permanently lost.

2. Rules of Engagement:

Periodically, Sung Jin-Woo would send orders to his legions of angels and dark angels to enter the battlefield. The two armies would clash in a display of their raw power, strategy, and skill.

The battles were not mindless; they were carefully orchestrated. The angels and dark angels fought with honor and determination, knowing that their victories and defeats were reflections of their strength and devotion.

3. The Eternal Resurrection:

Sung Jin-Woo imbued the realm with a unique resurrection system. At the end of each battle, the fallen were revived, their bodies and spirits restored to their original state. The realm's energy, drawn directly from Sung Jin-Woo himself, ensured that no soldier would ever truly perish.

The Endless Struggle

1. The Battles:

The clashes between the two armies were monumental, shaking the very fabric of the realm. The angels, with their radiant silver armor and divine light, often overwhelmed the dark angels with their precision and power.

However, the dark angels, clad in shadowy black flames, fought with unmatched ferocity and cunning. Their unpredictability often turned the tide of battle in their favor.

2. Victories and Defeats:

Though the angels often emerged victorious, the dark angels sometimes surprised even Sung Jin-Woo with their resilience and adaptability. These occasional victories brought satisfaction to Sung Jin-Woo, as they proved that his creations were not static or predictable.

Each battle ended with the fallen soldiers resurrected, ready to fight another day. The cycle continued endlessly, with neither side ever gaining a permanent advantage.

Sung Jin-Woo's Perspective

1. The Spectator:

Sung Jin-Woo watched these battles from his throne in the Godverse. The sight of his creations clashing in epic warfare filled him with pride and excitement. Each battle was a spectacle, a reminder of the boundless power and potential of his angels and dark angels.

2. The Purpose of War:

The Eternal Battlefields Realm was more than just entertainment for Sung Jin-Woo. It was a way to ensure that his creations remained sharp, constantly pushing their limits.

"Strength is born from struggle," he thought. Even in a perfect realm, growth required challenges. The battles were a way to keep his legions strong and prepared for any unforeseen threat.

A God’s Amusement

For Sung Jin-Woo, the Eternal Battlefields Realm was a source of endless amusement. Watching his creations clash in spectacular battles brought a sense of excitement to his otherwise uneventful existence.

1. Balance of Power:

The angels and dark angels were evenly matched, ensuring that neither side could dominate the other completely. This balance made each battle unpredictable, keeping Sung Jin-Woo engaged.

2. Moments of Surprise:

Sung Jin-Woo often found himself impressed by the creativity and ingenuity of his creations. Whether it was an angel devising a new strategy or a dark angel using sheer willpower to overcome impossible odds, these moments reminded him of the endless potential of his divine creations.

The Eternal Cycle

As the battles raged on, the Eternal Battlefields Realm became a cornerstone of Sung Jin-Woo’s existence. It was a place where his creations could test their strength, where victory and defeat were fleeting but growth was eternal.

1. The Endless Struggle:

For the angels and dark angels, the Eternal Battlefields Realm was both a proving ground and a place of honor. Each soldier fought with everything they had, knowing that their efforts were watched by the Absolute One himself.

Though the battles were eternal, they were never meaningless. Each clash brought new insights, new strategies, and new levels of strength.

2. A Divine Playground:

For Sung Jin-Woo, the Eternal Battlefields Realm was more than just a battlefield—it was a playground for his creations, a stage where they could shine.

"Let the strong grow stronger," he thought, his eyes gleaming with satisfaction.
